Tempranillo

Winery: Bodegas Abanico

Region: Vino de la Tierra de Castilla

Grapes: 100% Tempranillo

Winery: Bodegas Abanico began in the autumn of 2006 when Rafael de Haan and Nuria Altes decided to make their own wine in Celler Batea, Terra Alta.

Since 2006 Rafael and Nuria have developed numerous brands from all over Spain and continue to search out great wines, regions and projects to add to their range. Today, they are confident that every wine justifies its place in their portfolio and represents true quality, regional authenticity, varietal character, as well as great value.

Wine: Produced from Tempranillo vines averaging 20 years old. The vines are grown in sandy clay-loam with high level of active limestone. The climate there is continental with Mediterranean influence; a cold winter is followed by hot summer days and warm summer nights. Grapes underwent a pre-fermentation cold soak to enhance color and fruit aroma in the finished wine. Fermentation occurred in temperature controlled stainless steel tanks.

Reviews: This wine has not yet been reviewed.

Reviews for previous vintages:

“Deep ruby. Ripe red berries, dried cherry pit and a touch of pipe tobacco on the perfumed nose. Smoky and focused in the mouth, offering bitter cherry and rose pastille flavors sharpened by a peppery nuance. Takes a turn to darker blue fruits on the youthfully tannic finish, which hangs on with good tenacity. Interestingly, this wine is called Tempranillo on the front label while on the back label it is referred to as Cencibel, which is an old, local name for the variety.”
